Apostle J. H. Smith's Narrative.

JARMAN'S BEARD LEFT BEHIND.

The President of the European Mission interviewed by a Newspaper Representative.

The Millennial Star of December 15th contains the following:

Early yesterday morning Elder John Henry Smith and Elder Samuel R. Bennion waited upon the chief constable, with a view to see if nothing could be done to prevent such attacks as were made upon the Latter-day Saints at the Temperance Hall, Ellesmere-road, on Sunday afternoon, as well as to punish the Jarman party for the disturbance they caused. Mr. Jackson pointed out that the building in which they had held their meeting was not "licensed" for services of that description. The elders wanted to know if Jarman could not be a rector, but it was stated that Jarman had himself answered that question by leaving the town. All that could be ascertained about him yesterday, beyond the information forwarded last night by one of his friends "that he had lost part of his beard and was very ill," was that he had "fetched" the apparatus with which he illustrated his lectures from the Vestry Hall, Westbury, and was understood to be proceeding straight to the Midland Station. Elder J. H. Smith, who is a man of great muscular development, one of the "twelve apostles," and is "President of the European Mission." He is also one of the council of the apostles, whose mission it is to preach the principles of the Latter-day Saints, and to call to their assistance, when they require, members of the "seventies," who, on being summoned, must proceed on the same business. Elder J. H. Smith is carrying on a mission in Scandinavia, Germany and Switzerland, and arrangements are now being made to commence operations in Constantinople. There is also a mission in India. Last year 2,000 emigrants, as the result of the European mission, left this country and Scandinavia for Utah. The popular idea that the Mormons pay their expenses is erroneous. The "believers" must wait patiently until they have accumulated sufficient money for that purpose. In some cases the relatives and friends, who have preceded them, forward funds to aid their passage, and occasionally the authorities at Utah advance loans to the emigrants, who are bound, however, to pay it back in the land of their adoption. In Sheffield district, which includes Chesterfield, they have about 180 adherents. The number is declining, as they "keep going west," and the conference is held annually to receive reports and see how the cause is progressing.

Elder J. H. Smith, the president of the European mission, was accompanied to Sheffield by Elders Samuel R. Bennion, Reuben S. Collett (six feet three and a half inches), Thomas Biggs (who is over six feet), and Elders Winward and Brown. These occupied the platform at the Ellesmere-road Hall on Sunday afternoon, and just below them, in the body of the hall, were two local "Saints," Mr. Perkins and Mr. John Favell (the latter of whom had his forehead laid open with a stick.) Elder Smith, in reply to our representative yesterday, stated that the account of the riots gave a very accurate version of what occurred, and "it was as just as he could expect in this country, where there was so much prejudice against them." "When I got to the hall," continued the Apostle, "I was informed Mr. Jarman was present, and there was likely to be riots. What were we to do? I said we had advertised for a congregation, and as they had come we had better open the doors and get to work. There would then be about 100 of our people and probably 300 or more of the Jarman party. The doors were accordingly opened, and in they rushed. We saw we were outnumbered, and that they would have their own way, so there was nothing for it but to put our backs up against the wall and die game. Collett, our giant, opened with a brief address, explaining the principles. He was listened to quietly. After he had finished, we consulted with our friends, and it was decided I had better talk a little. My rising was the signal for a great uproar. Jarman did not want me to be heard. I suspect, because he knew I should gain the sympathies of the people. A Sheffield man, whose name is said to be Ward, who has been helping Jarman, rose in the body of the hall, and asked whether other people would be allowed to speak. I answered that no one would be allowed to speak in that building except those on the platform. At that they made a rush towards us. Several steps in the centre led to the platform, which was as high as the level of a man's breast. Ward was the first at the steps. I told him he could not come on, and stopped him. Then the police came in, and the struggle got severe. Jarman was shouting out to me all sorts of things. One man pressed forward to the platform. I was under the necessity of taking him by the seat of his pants and throwing him off—ten feet or so. He came back, and Collett, our giant, got him in the same way and flung him back—he fairly flew—and when he "landed" he did not make a third try. Ultimately the police got Ward out, but Jarman clung about the entrance, and by-and-by they made a fresh attack by the side door, and then there was another warm scrimmage. Down in the crowd John Favell received a violent blow with a stick. Jarman's people gathered about me, and one seized me by the bottom of the pantaloons to pitch me off the platform. What did I do? I just kicked him off. It was not Mr. Jarman, who was six or seven feet away at the time. During this struggle Jarman charged me with being concerned in the Mountain Meadow massacre. He called out that I was responsible for it, whereas when that was done I was a baby. He asked the crowd to look at me, as I was the man who was responsible for all this. I advised them to look at Jarman's face, and that would satisfy them. No doubt there was a good deal of kicking during the riot, for we were outnumbered, and had to do the utmost we could defend ourselves. I have been accustomed to violent opposition, and have got used to it; but I did feel a strong desire to go down among them, and go for them. However, I resisted that desire, and simply defended myself and others. A couple of old ladies, with umbrellas, struck out vigorously at Jarman's people. It was hot while it lasted. In fact, I never saw half-a-dozen men stand as pretty a chance of being pummelled as we did. Towards the end we went to a room at the back, and the crowd, thinking we were making off, caused the work of clearing the hall to be easier for the police, who locked the doors, and then we returned and resumed our conference. In the evening Mr. Bennion went to the hall-keeper and told him we desired to come and hold our meeting, and would do so, but that we could not be responsible for any damage that might occur to the hall, as we had not the money to pay. The answer was "That we could have no meeting, and the doors were locked. At the time Jarman and a crowd of over 300 people were clamoring outside. I had been warned that I was to get a dressing at night. An atheist, who said a word for us outside, was received with a shout. 'He's one of them; make him sit,' and they went for him. We walked to a private house and held our meeting as best we could. An idea seized the rioters that we had gone to the little place at the Wicker, where they proceeded to smash the windows." Elder Smith states that the police acted with wisdom and decision, and being better acquainted with the temper of the crowd than the elders, quelled the disturbance successfully. He desired Jarman to be arrested this afternoon, as he did not think the opportunity would be offered again. Jarman's life is well known to him. The Elder says Jarman has two wives, both of whom are divorced, and that they are respectable women who have no sympathy with their erstwhile husband. He repudiates Jarman's charge that the Mormons took his family from him, and altogether gives the "Mormon Exposer" what he calls "a very black record." It seems that this is not the first time that Mr. Jarman has vigorously opposed the Mormons. He was at the "Wicker" room a fortnight ago, on the same business, and it was there he got to know of the conference.

"One of the Committee" writes to correct "a few mistakes" in the account of the anti-Mormon riots at Brightside. His principal point is that "a gentleman (a respectable tradesman)" was pushed down by Elder Smith, and that "two (small) policemen" then walked him out of the hall. "This (he says) was the only case where brute force was brought into play in ejecting any one, 'providing there was not much rioting.' Our correspondent immediately after says that 'Jarman lost a good portion of his beard.' 'I, and many more, saw him kicked by Smith.' 'One of the committee' adds that 'Jarman is very ill from the apostolic treatment he received,' and that the anti-Mormon Committee are 'God-fearing men belonging to religious denominations.' 'One of the Committee' can scarcely be serious in his statement that only one case of brute force occurred. The elders themselves plead guilty to flinging several people from the platform. 'Mr. Jarman is very ill from the apostolic treatment he received,' Mr. John Favell had his forehead opened with a stick. Police-constable Cookson had a nasty kick on the knee, etc., etc. The information was obtained from eye-witnesses of the riots, and it is just possible that 'One of the Committee,' who took a prominent part in the fray, may have been too much occupied to notice the disturbance in all its bearings.—The Sheffield Daily Telegraph.

The following notice appears in the Star with reference to the same subject: To Presidents of Conferences:

As Mr. Jarman is still threatening to break up the meetings of the saints, and otherwise annoy them, we advise the presidents of conferences to obtain the proper licenses for their places of worship as soon as they can. If Mr. Jarman or anyone else should then disturb them, let him be immediately summoned or arrested.

visited St. Helena for change of climate but found it too hot. Then I went to Hayward's and it was too dull. At Berkeley students annoyed me with their hoodlums. It was too foggy in San Francisco and too dark at Santa Cruz. Wherever I went I was uncomfortable, uneasy and unsettled. A friend suggested that this state of unrest might possibly be occasioned by biliousness or a disordered stomach, and advised a trial of Fresche's Hamburg Tea, giving me a package as a present. Since then I use it occasionally, and was never better in my life. I advise all to try it.
